This festival not only celebrates jazz but also promotes cultural exchange and artistic collaboration. It features a program that extends beyond this genre, encompassing other musical expressions such as rumba, son, and danzón. Additionally, it includes various academic meetings open to all ages and focused on all forms of art.

Jazz Plaza has evolved into a Festival of the Arts thanks to its ongoing integration of other artistic manifestations throughout its history, linking jazz with visual arts, dance, ballet, photography, and cinema, creating a unique space where diverse artistic sensibilities converge.

Each year, the festival showcases the work of prominent figures from the visual arts. For this edition, we are honored to feature one of the greats of Cuban art: Alfredo Sosa Bravo, National Prize for the Visual Arts (1997), just before his 95th anniversary.

His piece, “El Guateque,” will intertwine music and color in the 41st edition of Jazz Plaza.
